State Tennis Champs Ask for New Courts

The Nock Middle School tennis courts

NEWBURYPORT – For the last two years the Newburyport High School girls' tennis team has won the state championship, but always with other teams hosting the championships.

Newburyport trains outstanding players, whose record entitled them to be the host for the year-end tournament. But according to Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Assn. (MIAA) rules, the tournaments cannot be played here because the city does not have enough courts in the same area.

Last year, the school district took a major step to solving the problem by rebuilding two courts on Johnson Street on the east corner of the middle school campus, but the state rules require the host school to have four courts together.

Across town at Atkinson Park are three more courts, but since these courts are not close to the existing Nock courts, they do not qualify.

"Because there are only three courts (at Atkinson), the matches take twice as long, as only half the positions can play at one time," the school district told the Community Preservation Commission (CPC) last week.

Teams of three singles matches and two doubles matches play two out of three sets, which can run past dark.

"The need is there," said George Bradshaw with the Friends of Newburyport Tennis.

Georgetown Faces $3 million Override

GEORGETOWN – Property owners here are facing the possibility of a hefty tax increase to overcome a shortfall in revenues that has been years in the making.

The Finance Advisory Committee voted unanimously last week to move forward with a proposal to the Board of Selectmen and Town Meeting members that the total tax burden be raised by $3 million for 2025.

Because the increase would exceed the state ceiling of no more than 2.5 percent, the proposal must be approved at Town Meeting May 6 and a week later at the Town Election.

Projections are that the proposal would increase taxes on a $628,000 home, the average priced home in Georgetown, by $975 per year.

The measure must be approved by the Board of Selectmen before it is put on the Town Meeting warrant.

"This does not make any of us comfortable, but we have to do it," said Ed Dubie, chair of the Finance Advisory Committee.

Anticipating that the tax increase will not be popular, Town Administrator Orlando Pacheco told the Finance Advisory Committee that he planned to employ Guilfoil Public Relations at $500 a month to run a campaign to inform residents of the need for the tax increase.

For several years, town revenues have been declining, particularly from the $500,000 a year loss in cannabis host payments, while expenses to fund improvements in the schools and in the police and fire department were postponed. The town has dipped into reserve funds in recent years to cover expenses.

"We've been living on our savings. Now it is time to pay the price," Dubie said. Continued on page 3

Learn About Pesticides and Bees

By Ava Moeckel, Reporter

The Northeast Harvest Buy Local Program will be holding its 2024 Agricultural Conference this week at the Topsfield Fairgrounds. These sessions will offer information about pesticide safety, management of bees and other pollinators and tick biology.

The goal of the Buy Local Program, which represents almost 400 farms in Essex and Middlesex counties, is to connect farmers with consumers.

Professional Acknowledgment for Continuing Education (PACE) credits will be awarded for attending the sessions.

Starting at 9 am Wednesday, Laurie Manning from the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture and Andrea Szylvian from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will discuss pesticide residues, potential health effects of pesticide exposures and how to avoid bringing pesticide residues home. The Worker Protection Standard (WPS) is designed to protect agricultural workers and pesticide handlers from the risks associated with prolonged pesticide exposure.

After lunch, at 12:45 p.m., there will be an interactive presentation on how humans can be more friendly to pollinators when managing landscapes for work and recreation. Attendees will learn about the biology and natural history of common wild and managed bees in the Northeast. It will outline best management practices. The session is led by Dr. Kim Skyrms, chief apiary inspector for the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture.

The program will also update the health of honeybees on a local and national level.

At 2:30 p.m., another workshop, led by Blake Dinius, an insect researcher, will cover the mysteries behind tick biology and ecology and the history of tick-borne disease in America.

James O'Brien, Northeast Harvest executive director for Essex and Middlesex counties Buy Local organization, for 18 years has been the general manager of the Topsfield Fair, the oldest continuously operating county fair in America.

There is no charge for this workshop, but registration is required. Please register with Dawn at 978-887-5000 or email dawn@topfieldfair.org. Space is limited.

Contributors to Northeast Harvest Agricultural Conference, include Essex Agricultural Society, Massachusetts Department of Agricultural Resources, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region 1 (New England), Apiary Inspector of America, Boston Honey, Holliston Chickadee Hill Farm, Rowley; Chris' Farm Stand, Haverhill/Peabody; Herrick Farm, Rowley; Ipswich Shellfish Fish Market; Mann Orchards, Methuen; Neptune Harvest, Gloucester; Northeast Nursery, Peabody, and A&B Insurance, Westford.

Dubie's concern was what the town would have to do if the tax increase is rejected at Town Meeting or at the ballot box. The committee is meeting again next week to hear Pacheco outline the budget cuts that will have to be made if the increased is voted down.

Pacheco told the committee the town has $575,000 in capital improvement reserves, $1.8 million in its stabilization fund and more than $1 million in free cash. The stabilization fund is off limits, he said, because the credit rating agencies insist that a town of Georgetown's size keep at least $1.7 million for the worst-case scenarios.

The proposed school budget would increase by 6.32 percent to allow the school to revise the curriculum over the next several years to enhance the overall student performance. The school budget projects losing 10 to 11 teachers.

The proposed increase would also allow the police department to hire two more full-time officers, which has been a priority, and the fire department could add three more firefighters.

Health insurance for town employees, a major expensive, would run about $3.5 million, Pacheco said.

Tennis Champs

on these three courts is also challenging," according to the district, which said about 60 students play tennis.

The solution, according to a new proposal to the CPC, is to build two or maybe three courts on an underutilized flat stretch of grass that once was a softball diamond.

"New courts at the Nock would give them additional courts to use for both matches and practices and provide the opportunity to host playoff matches, which they cannot do now," the district said.

The Friends of Newburyport Tennis has raised $21,000 from more than 100 individual and corporate donations on a GoFundMe page, organized Rosemary Turgeon and others. The Institution for Savings donated $2,500, the Joy Nest gave $1,145 and the grandparents of one team member contributed $1,451.

Last week, Steve Bergholm, director of facilities for the Newburyport schools and Kim Turner, head of special projects for Mayor Sean Reardon, a tennis enthusiast himself, asked the city's Community Preservation Commission (CPC) for $474,560 to turn an underutilized softball diamond at the Nock Middle School into two, maybe three courts.

Only a few feet uphill from the two new courts, the additional courts will give Newburyport's teams enough courts to host the state championship tournament.

The plan, outlined for the CPC, is to build a viewing stand between the existing and proposed courts for spectators.

That proposal is one of the largest being considered by the CPS and is competing with requests for $75,000 to study replacing the warping and cracking boards on the popular Merrimack River boardwalk, $141,000 to restore the Swan Fountain in the Bartlett Mall pond and more than a dozen other projects.

Newburyport has "a robust tennis community," the proposal reads. In addition to the outdoor courts, it has an indoor facility with six courts. The only problem with the indoor courts at the Newburyport Tennis Club on Low Street is they are privately owned and rent out at about $60 per hour.

"The renovated courts have been utilized steadily by residents of all ages for serious singles and doubles matches, lessons and less formal recreational play. Additional courts would increase those opportunities," the proposal said.

The area available to be farmed includes two parcels of approximately 17 acres and 7 acres respectively. The farming would be done under a license issued by the Rowley Conservation Commission and would be revocable at will on thirty (30) days' notice. The Town is looking for qualified applicants (farmers) from the Town of Rowley or directly abutting municipalities. Applicants would have to provide a detailed planting and pest control plan (IPM) and have liability insurance. Written expressions of interest are requested by April 15, 2024. Interested parties should contact the Conservation Commission's Agent at 978-948-2330 for further details.

Health & Wellness

By J. PETER ST. CLAIR, DMD

Dentistry is one of those things in life....as with most things.... that people view in different ways. Some are interested in their appearance, some are interested in their health, some both, and others none of the above. A major role of health care providers is to make patients aware of the possibilities to improve their quality of life. When our services are perceived as a commodity, expectations are often not achieved.

Dentists play a key role in screening patients for many disorders relative to nutrition and in providing appropriate referrals into the health care system. Although the importance of integrating diet and nutrition guidance into dental care has been advocated for decades by educators, it continues to be ignored except by a handful of prevention-oriented practitioners.

Many of the world's most significant health problems are linked to poor dietary practices, including over-nutrition and under-nutrition. Nutrition plays a fundamental role in health, and dental professionals have the opportunity to be a critical link between discovery and wellness.

Brighter Smiles...

INTEGRATED HEALTH CARE

There is a great deal of evidence linking oral infections, including periodontal disease, nutrition and immunological response. We have clear evidence linking oral disease with adverse pregnancy outcomes, diabetes, cardiovascular disease and stroke. In addition, obesity, which is an epidemic facing our country, is significantly affecting the incidence of diabetes, cardiovascular disease and overall lifespan. We know there are direct connections between these problems and oral disease. What is the role of the dentist? Should the dentist just be a tooth fixer?

As the body of data linking systemic health conditions and oral infection grows, this expanded understanding will result in more profound discoveries. However, we know right now that the scientific bridge between oral disease and systemic health is often mediated by diet and nutrition.

The beneficiary of this profound evidence should be you, the dental patient. It should not only be the responsibility of the physician or specialized nutritionist to incorporate this information into practice; the dentist should be playing a key role.

For the most part, the dentist is the only one who examines the mouth. It used to be that the dentist only looked at the teeth and only fixed problems if they arose. Most dentists screen for periodontal, or gum, problems as well as oral cancer. The trend is to address these problems earlier than ever before. Identifying developmental issues related to facial growth during childhood, for example, is much more than prescribing orthodontics. Lives can be changed with early intervention.

People tend to have ingrained in their head that the dentist just looks at the teeth and treatment should be the same as 25 years ago. The fact of the matter is, things change and there are no two dentists who practice identically. Each individual's philosophy of care comes from personal experience, review of literature and the type and amount of continuing education taken.

One thing we all hope is that our health care provider, dentist or physician, has our best interest in mind. There is room for improvement in the communication between all health care providers. As science continues and evidence grows, it is the responsibility of all health care providers to work towards a more integrated health care system.

Dr. St. Clair maintains a private dental practice in Rowley dedicated to health-centered family dentistry. He has a special interest in treating snoring, sleep apnea and TMJ problems. If there are certain topics you would like to see written about or questions you have please email them to him at jpstclair@stclairdmd.com
